On Tuesday we were honored to host guest lecturer, Chris Celenza from Rome, Italy. Celenza is a professor at Johns Hopkins University on temporary leave as the director of the American Academy in Rome. He spoke to our students and guests about the 'missing' Italian Renaissance: the body of philosophical work written in Latin from the late 1300s through the 1400s. His lecture was very well received and sparked an interesting discussion that spilled over to the refreshments table.

Thank you, Professor Celenza for coming.
